

WINE LIST

DOES WINE GO WITH CHINESE CUISINE? ABSOLUTELY!

There are some special secrets to enjoying wine with Chinese cuisine. Whether your choice is red or white, vibrant acidity is important in refreshing the palate and stimulating the appetite.

A little sugar or richness in white wines can be appropriately soothing when it comes to stronger, livelier or spicy heat in certain dishes. Light reds like rosé and pinot noir are very versatile throughout an entire meal.

The Man Tong Kitchen wine list is cleverly presented in sections defined by a wine's suitability to the diverse flavours and texture of Chinese cuisine.

We have colour and number coded these sections using a glass symbol which indicates our suggested wine pairing for each dish. We also have many wines available by the glass so you can experiment at your leisure.

PINOT NOIR & LIGHT REDS

Soft, silky red wine with a spicy warmth and natural fruity sweetness - notably pinot noir - is very versatile with Chinese cuisine with its supple tannins and elegance; superb with duck and white meats with spicy sauces, also rice or noodle meat dishes. Beaujolais is equally versatile in its lightness and similarity to Rosé

MEDIUM BODIED FIRM REDS

With firm tannins, these elegant, low extract red wines with assertive acidity and considerable structure pair well with strong flavoured meats such as lamb and beef, also where rich sauces are used or hearty dishes where the tannins freshen the palate. Equally good with smoky, wok-fried noodle dishes
